American Cruise Lines Announces Its First Eagle Society Cruise

American Cruise Lines has planned its first Eagle Society Cruise for April 11, 2009 to the Historic Antebellum South. Along with all the other features passengers enjoy about American Cruise Lines, a variety of exciting events are being planned to make this a memorable experience. Some of these events will include enhanced shore excursions, an onboard reception, and specially invited guest speakers. Mr. Charles Robertson, President & CEO of American Cruise Lines, also plans to join the cruise to spend time with Eagle Society members.

American Cruise Lines' Historic Antebellum South cruise journeys to charming ports such as historic Beaufort, with its beautifully restored antebellum homes, remote islands filled with legends of bygone eras, and the grand southern cities of Charleston and Savannah that exemplify the graciousness and true southern hospitality of one of America's most elegant regions. For the naturalist, coastal wildlife preserves provide ample opportunity to view the flora and fauna that make this natural environment so unique.

The Eagle Society is an exclusive club offering a variety of incentives and rewards to further enhance your cruise experience. Entry into the club is complimentary once passengers have cruised with American Cruise Lines. The club was initiated in the summer of 2008.
